LINCOLNSHIRE WASTE OIL

Lincolnshire Waste Oils would like to inform you of the forthcoming changes to premises registration and consignment note systems. From the 1st April 2016, two processes are changing that will affect you and your waste management. These are:

1. Premises Registration – There will no longer be a requirement for any premises in England to register with the Environment Agency, even if they produce or store over 500kg of hazardous waste per year. Waste producing sites in Wales and Scotland will still be required to register sites as per the current system.
2. Consignment Note – To accommodate the removal of premises registration, the format of the consignment note code, which appears on every consignment note, will change regardless of the amount of hazardous waste produced, stored or handled.

The first six characters of the consignment note code (currently the premises registration number) must be replaced by the first six letters or numbers (not symbols) of the business name. See the following example given by the Environment Agency:

First six characters of the organisation that produced the waste
